

MEMORIAL

In Memory of Prof. Leonardo Corcos

G Peruzzi¹

¹Casa di Cura Villa Donatello, Firenze, Italy.

submitted: Aug 21, 2017, accepted: Sep 9, 2017, Epub Ahead of Print: Sep 10, 2017

Conflict of interest: none

DOI: 10.24019/jtav.31 - Corresponding author: Dr. Giampiero Peruzzi, giampieroperuzzi@iol.it © 2017 Fondazione Vasculab impresa sociale ONLUS. All rights reserved.

Prof. Leonardo Corcos

Leonardo Corcos born on 3 September 1946 in Florence, Italy, died in a terrible motorcycle accident near Florence on 13 August 2017.

Leonardo received his degree in Medicine, University Firenze, 1970 and trained as a general, vascular surgeon and phlebologist.

We got to appreciate him how a talented and innovative medical researcher he was, as well as tenacious, meticulous and precise.

Experienced doctor and always attentive to the patient, he leaves in those who knew and enjoyed him a huge void and at the same time a lasting memory.

He was a trusted friend and secure with strong attachment to his family.

Active and dynamic man, he engaged in leisure in many other activities besides the profession: in particular we remember him as a great pianist and sailor.

Founder and Vice President of the Italian Society of Phlebo-lymphology, member of the Italian College of Phlebology and of the UIP, author of numerous scientific publications, he attended many conferences and loved teaching. He was an outstanding reviewer of manuscripts for a variety of medical Journals and always strove to help junior authors and researchers enhance their work.

Condolences to his family by everyone who knew him.

Giampiero Peruzzi, MD